U.S. Warns Oil Prices Pose a Disaster Threat

Kissinger Decries 2 Perils Of Nationalism, A-Power

By Marilyn Berger

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y., Sept. 23 (WP).-Secretary of State Henry Kissinger warned today that "the very structure of world security" is being undermined by the spread of elomic-weapons tech-nology, which threatens nuclear catestrophe, and by unrestrained economic nationalism which, as reflected in artificially high oil prices, poses the danger of a world depression.

In a statement at times unrelenting in its pessimism, Mr. Kissinger told the UN General Assembly that the nations of the world have been using "old patterns of thought and action" to meet. serious new political and economic problems. The fundamental question today, he said. "Is whether our vision can keep up with our challenges.

"Ideologies and doctrines drawn for the last century do not even address, let alone solve, the unprecedented problems of today," the American diplomat declared. Reading his statement slowly, in a low, almost hourse voice that seemed to intensify the gloom, Mr. Kissinger ticked off these aspects of the world's potential for catastrophe.

"The world has dealt with local conflicts as if they were perpetually manageable ... The tolerance of local conflict tempts world holocaust. We have no guarantee that some local crisis perhaps the next-will not explode beyond our control."

· The world has dealt with nuclear weapons as if restraint were automatic. Their very awesomeness has chained these weapons for almost three de-cades... Now, political inhibi-tions are in danger of crumbling. Nuclear estastrophe looms more plausible—whether through design

. The world has dealt with the economy as if its constant advance were inexcrable... We continue to deal with economic issues on a national, regional or bloc basis at the precise moment that our interdependence is multiplying. Strains on the fabric and institutions of the world economy threaten to engulf us all in a general depression."

Never-Ending ... Spiral' Mr. Kissinger told the delegates: "The world cannot sustain even the present level of [oil] prices, much less continu-ing increases. The prices of other commodities will inevitably rise in a never-ending inflationary spiral... The complex fragile structure of global economic cooperation required to sustain national economic growth stands in danger of being shattered."

Declaring that the high oil prices thus threaten the economies of petroleum producers as well as those of consumers, he said that there had been "deliberate decisions to restrict production and maintain an artificial price level."

"What has gone up by political decision can be reduced by political decision," Mr. Kissinger asserted, adding: "It can be in the interest of no country or group of countries to base policies oo test of strength, for a policy of confrontation would end in disaster for all."

He said it was understandable that oil producers were seeking a better life for their people and a just return for their diminishing resources, but he emphasized that it is the poorer developing (Continued on Page 2, Col. 3)

Ford Bids Nations Join 'Project Interdependence'

By Carroll Kilpatrick

DETROIT, Sept. 23 (WP) .- President Ford warned all the oilproducing nations in unusually blunt language today that the artificial rigging of oil prices could bring "disastrous consequences."

At a world energy conference with representatives of 69 nations present. Mr. Ford said thet no nation can benefit at the expense of others "except for the very short term and at very great risk." Without saying what consumer nations might do in the way of reprisal against petroleum-price rigging, the President said that oil-producing nations need the goods which only industrialized countries can provide.

Characterizing the dangers posed by energy shortages as "clear" and "very severe," Mr. Ford invited the nations represented here to join in a "Project Interdependence" to meet the world's fuel needs. If successful. he said, it can reduce the world's reliance on oil supplied by a few

In proposing Project Interdependence, the new chief executive linked it with the "Project Independence" proposed for the United States by former President Richard Nixon, However, Mr. Pord also seemed to play down the goal of Project Independence, saying thet this country's target of self-sufficiency did not mean that it would ever stop importing some energy supplies.

Categories of Danger The President said he fully understands the desires of the leading oil-producing countries to earn a fair price, but he declared that "exorbitant prices can only distort the world economy, run the risk of worldwide depression and threaten the breakdown of the world's order and safety."

Sheikh Ahmed Zaki Yamani. Saudi Arabia's off minister, told reporters after the speech that he had "heard no velled threats -not at all. What I heard from him was a tone of cooperation rather than confrontation."

Sheikh Yamani has been unsuccessful in efforts to persuade fellow Arab oil producers to reduce oll prices. He played a leading role in negotiations that led to the lifting of last winter's oll embargo against the West. President Ford, declaring that nations are sometimes "forced to choose between conflict and cooperation," nevertheless ruled out any thought of military intervention as a tactic in the oil-price struggle. He said of Project Interdepen-dence that "this task is surely monumental, but the United States believes it is possible and essential." "The advantages of cooperation are as visible as the dangers of confrontation," he declared, "and that gives me hope as well as

"Everyone can now see the pulverizing impact of energy price increases on every aspect of the world economy," Mr. Ford went on. "The food problem, the inflation problem, the monetary problem and other major probems are directly linked to the all-pervasive energy problem."

He emphasized that the United States will take "tough steps to obtain the degree of self-sufficiency necessary to avoid disruption of our economy."

The U.S. government, Mr. Ford said, is now spending more to stimulate greater energy production than President John F. Kennedy originally committed to but a man on the moon.

"Sovereign nations try to avoid dependence on other nations that exploit their own resources to the detriment of others," the President said. "Sovereign nations cannot allow their policies to be dictated, or their fate decided, by artificial rigging and distortion of world commodity markets.

"No one can foresee the extent of the damage nor the end of the disastrous consequences if nations refuse to share nature's cifus for the benefit of all mankind." In proposing Project Interdependence, Mr. Ford urged the following five principles: · All nations must seek to increase energy production, enlarging and diversifying their sources of supply. • The rate of increase in consumption must be reduced and waste eliminated. Energy-saving possibilities are as promising in the short term as production inereases, he said.

on moves toward peace. Freedom of navigation through the 103-mile-long waterway is gusranteed by the 1888 Constan-

SAIGON, Sept. 23 (NYT).-The Saigon government announced today that it would contribute $2.8 million to the bankrupt International Commission of Control and Supervision to ease a pressing financial crisis.

"Everyone knows that the economic situation of South Vietnam is very low," said Brig. Gen. Phan Hos Hiep, Salgon's repre-sentative to the Two-Party Military Cease-Fire Commission. "But even so, we want to contribute to the ICCS to help keep the peace in Vietnam.

The general was contrasting his government's last-minute generosity with the tightfisted stand of North Vietnam and the Viet Cong's Provisional Revolutionary Government, Both have refused to contribute to the commission saying that the United States continued to "interfere in the internal affairs of South Vietnam" and failed to make postwar "reparations" to Hanol.

By Walter Sullivan

NEW YORK, Sept. 23 (NYT). -Mariner-10 completed its second flyby of Mercury yesterday after transmitting 500 pictures which provide evidence that the planet, in its infancy, shrank enough to rupture its surface in many

In the pictures received during the weekend the resulting scarps. or cliffs, presumably formed by such shrinkage, can be seen running for hundreds of miles across the landscape. This is particularly true in the south pole area, which was photographed for the first time.

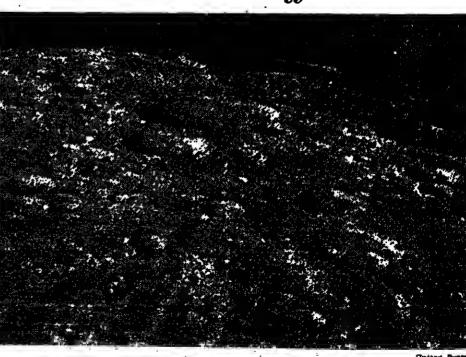

According to Dr. Bruce Murray of the California Institute of Technology, head of the team responsible for analyzing the television transmissions, an effort will be made to map these scarps and see if they form systematic

. In a telephone interview he noted that "thousands of square miles," are crisscrossed by the scarps. But, unlike the surfaces of the earth, the moon and Mars, there are no signs of tension, such as rifts or fissures.

Thus, he said, there is now strong support for the suspicion, derived from pictures obtained on Mariner's first encounter with Mercury in March, that the planet has shrunk. From other evidence it is also estimated that the planet has an iron core constituting about 75 per cent of its total volume. Some believe the shrinkage occurred when this core cooled, although others argue that the surface may still have been too hot then to become imprinted with scarps. Another opinion is that the core changed its crystal structure to a more compact form, shrinking slightly.

Mariner's encounter, in which it came within 30,000 miles of the planet Saturday afternoon, was not as close as the one in March, which passed only 435 miles from the surface. However, the angle of view was different, adding 13 per cent to the previously photographed 25 per cent of the surface.

presidential race of the centennial year with grace and wisdom. Despite his ability to strike sparks from an otherwise disillusioned electorate, there can be no doubt but that his candidacy in 1976 against whomever the Republicans chose would be converted into a squalid confrontation hetween Chappaquiddick and Watergate, and constitute a very real strain npon the already staggering political morale of the American people.

The senator had his personal reasons for this step; they were, according to his own statement, the deciding factor. Miness within his immediate family; the responsibilities he has shouldered for the children of his murdered brothers, form an Atridean burden which a contest for the presidency—especially one in which his own private life would be under such remorseless scrutiny - would complicate beyond the endurance of most men.

Sen. Kennedy's decision of course, throws the Democratic race wide open. He was the most prominent contender in the polls, even though the politicians worried about the impact of Chappaquiddick, both the events of that tragedy as they are known and the unanswered questions it left hehind. Indeed, his potential opponents in the presidential primaries felt that they were inhibited from open campaigning by the looming presence in the wings of the third of the Kennedy brothers to dominate Democratic politics.

Sen, Edward Kennedy bowed out of the Now, with his "firm, final and unconditional" withdrawal from the 1976 race, and his clear assertion that he believed this to take him out of direct concernment in presidential choices "for any foreseeable future," the way is clear for every Democrat who aspires to the White House to make the effort.

Not that Mr. Kennedy's influence will be absent from the party, or the nation. He will seek re-election to the Senate in 1976, and his authority there will probably be strengthened, rather than diminished, by yesterday's announcement in Boston. He has demonstrated that he can hold the support of his state, Massachusetts, despite Chappaquiddick, and he has also begun to win increasing support for the concrete measures he has proposed as national policy. This cannot fail to increase his leverage with respect to Democratic positions and personalities, even though it may never he concentrated into presidential power.

Perhaps the senator can take comfort from another who sat in the Senate, representing his state, a man who failed to win to the presidency but who left his mark on American destiny notwithstanding. That was Daniel Webster, and if Edward Kennedy never reaches the oratorical heights, and never attains the place in history won by the great advocate, he can still recognize that the presidency is not the only, even though it is the highest, goal of American political

Subsidizing the Ex-President

Even without the premature pardon and the deal on the presidential tapes and papers, President Ford's request for $850,000 to subsidize former President Nixon through this fiscal year would put the public's patience to a cruel test. Congressional mail and sentiment are running heavily against such generosity toward a man who resigned the presidency in disgrace in order to avoid being removed. Members of Congress can do little about the pardon except complain. Working out a more responsible arrangement for preservation of the papers and tapes may take some time. But, the subsidies for Mr. Nixon can be dealt with at once—and a House Appropriations Subcommittee has gotten off to a good start by voting the other day to slash the $850,000 request to $398,000. A Democratic move to cut $200,000 more was beaten by a single yote, and further cuts will undoubtedly be attempted on the House floor and in the

Under the presidential transition act, Mr. Nixon is eligible for some public aid and staff support during his first six months in private life. Under the Former Presidents Act, he is also entitled to a $60,000 pension 596,000 for stail every year for the rest of his life. But the Ford administration's requests go far beyond such ample sums and. in fact, seem designed not so much to ease Mr. Nixon's transition into private status as to enable him to perpetuate the imperial style which he enjoyed while president. Thus the administration originally asked for $40,000, later trimmed to $25,000, for travel for Mr. Nixon and his family and staffwithout revealing where they plan to go. The $850,000 also included $72,000 for telephone services, $26,000 for miscellaneous, and

$172,000 for office supplies-presumably for the San Clemente office which has already heen so well equipped at the public's ex-

In addition to rejecting much of that largesse, the House subcommittee refused to grant $110,000 which the administration wants to build and guard a vault for the papers and tapes of the Nixon presidency. As the panel concluded, it would be very wrong to go ahead with any aspect of the transfer of these records to San Clemente until new policies have been set to assure that all materials will be preserved and that the special prosecutor and others will have access as appropriate.

Congress may be doing what it can to keep the Nixon subsidies within reasonable bounds. But President Ford is also giving his predecessor some help which the Congress apparently can't cut. About 25 members of Mr. Nixon's personal staff-including Ronald Ziegler, Rose Mary Woods, a speechwriter, a maid, a valet and three military driversare still on the payroll of the White House and various agencies. Such detailing of federal employees to a former president is legal under the transition act for up to six months. So Mr. Ziegler could stay on the white House payroll until Feb. 9

Congress should not begrudge the former president the modest staff support he needs to answer mail. But neither should the public he required to underwrite a large establishment for Mr. Nixon and his family. The point of public help is to ease Mr. Nixon's transition to private life. The idea is not to perpetuate the standard of living to which Mr. Nixon became accustomed while he was abusing the powers of the presidency. THE WASHINGTON POST.

Second Poll in Britain

Britain is entering its second election campaign of 1974 facing its worst economic crisis since World War II. Yet the electorate is either so apathetic or so diblous that new elections will produce a government capable of governing effectively that Prime Minister Harold Wilson almost apologized in announcing Oct. 10 as polling day. Although the Labor, Conservative and Liberal parties concur on the dimensions of the crisis, particularly on the perils of an inflation that anproaches an annual rate of 20 per cent, none of the three offers anything very new for resolving it.

Mr. Wilson's Labor party, seeking the House of Commons majority that eluded it in February, will campaign as the government that settled the coal miners' strike, ended the three-day week brought on by the energy shortage, and got the country back to work. In a nation weary of industrial strife, Labor's biggest asset is the so-called "social contract" in which the unions promise restraint in wage demands to aid the fight against inflation.

Voters may, however, be highly skeptical about this strictly voluntary arrangement with union leaders who have rarely practiced wage restraint in the past. The voters also know that if Labor wins a substantial majority. Mr. Wilson will come under heavy pressure from his left wing to proceed with extensive nationalization of industry—a move likely to he as unpopular as it is irrelevant to Britain's economic problems.

NEW YORK-A new and very important controversy is raging in the medical and legal fields that touches or will touch every person reading these lines, one day or another, sooner or later. But Mr. Heath's record on inflation was no better than that of the three Wilson governments of the last 10 years. It has long seemed evident that a majority of Britons would prefer the kind of government denied them by existing party structures: one that shunned extremes of right and left but embraced a wide middle-road spectrum of progressive Tories, right-wing Laborites and Liberals. This sentiment helped the Liberals in February poll six million votes-nearly 20 per cent of the totalwhile winning only 14 Commons seats.

The only feasible path to a share of power for this party that commands the support of nearly one in five voters seems to be that of a coalition government in a situation where neither Labor nor the Tories has a majority. Labor has emphatically rejected coalition, but the Tories have kept the door siar, The most fascinating-and perhaps most important—question about this election may well be whether it turns Britain toward a coalition government for the first time since World War II.

Some Self-Inflicted U.S. Wounds

By Anthony Lewis

BOSTON-The disclosures of D covert CIA operations in Chile raise questions on two distinct levels: Was the particular activity against the Allende government justified? In general, is it wise for the United States to intervene surreptitiously in the in-ternal politics of other countries?

Covert action by the CIA has caused so much embarrassment to this country in recent years that only a serious threat to U.S. national security could begin to justify it. In those terms, putting aside all concern about American values and international proprietles, the intervention in Chile was plainly a mistake.

The Allende government, whatever its faults, did not threaten anything of ours except the property of American businesseswhich it had support from all Chilean parties in expropriating. Moreover, economic disaster was overtaking Allende in any case. becoming involved directly with the elements that brought him down, the United States unnecessarily made itself accessory to a bloody coup and a particularly cruel repression thereafter.

Cynical Contempt

The argument offered by Secretary Eissinger for the operations in Chile must set some kind of record in cynical contempt for his listeners' intelligence. It is that the CIA was only defending freedom by giving money to the opposition press and parties.

There is no evidence that Kissinger has ever shed a tear for freedom of the press or done anything about the bratal repression of freedoms by a dozen right-wing tyrannics. The image Kissinger has given this country is that of a friend to the Greek colonels. Now he is advising President Ford to visit South Korea, where the feeblest criticism of government may bring a death

Chile itself is a complete answer to the notion that the U.S. interest in intervening was liberty. The military regime that rules it now is one of the most repulsive governments in the world. A recent report by the International Commission of Jurists, confirming other studies, said torture was in subshock, burning with acid or cigarettes, extraction of nails, crushing of testicles, sexual assaults, hanging..." That is the regime that the U.S. rushed to support, after the coup, by resuming various forms of aid.

The argument that we were only protecting the opposition press and parties in Chile is also unpersuasive because it is untrue. As Seymour Hersh of The New York Times has brought out, most of the millions spent by the CIA in 1972 and 1973 went for support of striking truckers, shopkeepers and others whose activ-ities played a significant part in bringing Allende down.

Official Lies

Official lies are a problem of covert activity in general. They inevitably become necessary. And then, again and again in the United States, they are exposed, disbelief that has increasingly burdened American policy-makers. Concern about the credibility of U.S. foreign policy is one strong reason for giving up the practice of covert CIA operations. This case was made definitively just a year ago, in the magazine Foreign Affairs, by Nicholas Katzenbach, former undersecretary of state and attorney general.

"Our foreign policy must be based on policy and factual premises which are accepted by the overwhelming majority of the American people," Katzenbach wrote. As one step toward reestablishing credibility, he said, "We should abandon publicly all covert operations designed to influence political results in foreign countries:.. We should confine our covert activities overseas to the gathering of intelligence in-

Pragmatic

Katzenbach was not making a moral, but a pragmatic, argument that American covert operations were harming us more than others. Even the current CIA director, William Colby, recently took a very limited view of their utility, saying that it was "legit-imate" to consider abandoning them and that there would be no great impact on our security. But there are questions

And I refer specifically to "National" between Mismi and London, a route which I feel should have been granted to Pan Am. Did he raise any objection to American Airlines to Australia? All this did was to dilute the market. (And to all the domestics unleashed to Hawaii?) Even though he mentions it only in passing, does he find it normal that United States carriers should get less for the carriage of United States mail than foreign carriers get from the United States postal service for the carriage of that same mail, and doesn't this amount in fact to the United States' subsidizing foreign carriers? This amounts to millions of dollars annually, yes, of still good United States taxpayer dollars, given away-just like that. The urban project, under a Canadian, seeks the best way to manage the growth of cities, now a problem in both East and West. It tries to relate the tasks to commonly accepted goals, the mere listing of which presents a catalogue of the world's major problems: "Economic growth and development, social mobility and opportunity, equity and justice, environmental quality." There is the industrial project, the ecology and environment project, the biology and medical project—nine projects in all, seemingly separate but closely interrelated, dependent on each other for information, for stimulation, for questions as well as for answers.

All these problems are certainly studied elsewhere, but here at the International Institute for Applied Systems Analysis (HASA) they have been brought together under one roof to be viewed as one, regardless of national frontiers. After five years of delicate negotiation between Washington and Moscow, with the participa-tion of other countries, the institute's charter was signed two

Defusing the Presidency

By Barbara W. Tuchman

COS COB, Conn.—The Amerigreater risk than it is worth. The time has come to seriously consider the substitution of cabinet government or some form of shared executive power.

There is no use continually repeating that the form arranged by the Framers of the Constitution must serve forever unchanged. Monarchy too was once consider-ed immutable and even divinely established but it had to give way under changed conditions. The conditions of American executive power today, commanding agencies, techniques and instruments unimaginable in the eighteenth century, no more resemble the conditions familiar to Jefferson and Madison than they do those under Hammurabi.

The Framers may have been the most intelligent and farseeing political men ever to operate at one time in our history at they could not foretell the decline of the Congress. In too willing subservience it confirmed as vice-president an appointee of an already discredited president and will doubtless do so again in the case of Nelson Rockefeller. The executive will then consist of an appointee and his appointee, which is not what the Framers designed. The checks and balances they devised are out of balance.

Euphoric Moment

For one brief suphoris moment when the House Judiciary Committee functioned, it seemed the system might have revived, but when the House falled to carry through a vote on impea and the Senate said nothing, the self-emasculation was completed. If lost virginity cannot be restored neither can lost virility. I do not think the trend is toward righting the balance.

The presidency has gained too great a lead; it has bewitched the occupant, the press and the public. While this process has been apparent from John F. Kennedy an, it took the strange transformation of good old open-presidency Gerald Ford to make it clear that the villain is not the man but the office.

Hardly had he settled in the ambience of the White House than he began to talk like Louis XIV and behave like Richard Nixon. If there was one lesson to be learned from Water- in the first fourteen de gate it was the danger in overuse of the executive power and in interference with the judicial system. Within a month of taking office Mr. Ford has violated both at once. The swelling sense of personal absolutism shows in those disquieting remarks: "The ethical tone will be what I make it. . . . "In this situation I am the final authority . . " and, in deciding to block the unfolding of legal procedure, "My conscience says it is my duty. . . . judicial system can operate well enough without the dictate of Mr. Ford's conscience. Election Campaign Opens in Britain In Low-Key Style

By Alvin Shuster

' LONDON, Sept. 23 (NYT).—Britain's election ampaign opened today in a low key featuring auted appeals by politicians and an evident ack of enthusiasm by the public.

In the first of their daily press conferences sefore the vote Oct. 10, the party leaders ackled Britain's economic crisis in the matter of the party leaders. alm styles that may well be difficult to mainain in coming days. Each sought to portray masslf as a moderate man who understood the sublic's distaste for extremism

It was all in sharp contrast to the first days of the election seven months ago, when the british voted inconclusively and gave neither najor party an overall majority in the House of Commons. At that time, most of industry was on a three-day week, the miners were on trike and emotions were heated. General Bewilderment

This time, there is general bewilderment over vhy the electorate has to go through all the hetoric again so soon and little understanding of Prime Minister Harold Wilson's explanation hat his Labor party needs a strong majority o deal with the nation's problems. There are ilready fears among the experts of an extremey low turnout and another inconclusive result. (Speaking at the Labor party's first daily ampaign news conference, Chancellor of the Exchequer Denis Healey said that inflation which had been rising at a 19-per cent annual ate in the last few months of the former Conservative party government is now at 8.4 per sent a year, Associated Press reported.]

Edward Heath, the Conservative party leader who was ousted as prime minister in the February voting, embraced the most marked thange in style today. In the first election this vear, he stood before reporters, denounced the miners and demanded to know "who rules Britain"—the unions or the government.

Today, he sat throughout the press conference, talked of the need for obtaining a national consensus to deal with inflation and other problems, pledged to consult widely on all policies and said that his party deliberately avoided controversial issues in its election manifesto in the search for consensus politics. He expressed confidence that the Tories could cooperate with the unions.

His manner, however, prompted a reporter to ask Mr. Heath why he was so reserved. "You would never know an election was on," the reporter said.

Put Britain First'

Mr. Heath, who was sitting in front of his party's slogan, "Put Britain First," said he thought his audience preferred quiet and intimate conversation.

Across the street, Mr. Wilson appealed for a strong working majority in Parliament, and dismissed the resignation from the Labor party of Lord Chalfont.

Mr. Wilson said that he did not realize that Lord Chalfont, who served in the Labor gov-ernment of 1964 to 1970, was a member of the Labor party.

Moderate Views

The resignation of Lord Chalfont, was viewed by Mr. Heath as showing that "those holding noderate views were having greater and greater tifficulty in exerting any influence within the party." Jeremy Thorne, the le liberal party, took the same view.

Harold Wilson

Edward Heath

A crucial question in the election is whether the Liberals will maintain the strength they demonstrated in the February voting, when they captured nearly 30 per cent of the vote and 14 seats in the 635-seat Parliament. The switch to the Liberals and other small parties last time contributed to the indecisiva outcome and the first minority government here in 45 years.

The relatively restrained approaches by the leaders so far reflects their feeling that the British public wants a middle course in government and rejection of extremes on the left and right. Mr. Heath's emphasis on national consensus, for example, is thus designed to attract those who voted for the Liberals in February to protest the stridency and tension that followed the coal miners' strike and last winter's industrial chaos.

The second volume of "Gulag" was published in Russian by the YMCA Press in Paris in June. The book concentrates on the conditions in Soviet prison camps between 1918-1956, whereas the first volume focuses primarily on arrests and interrogations.

In assessing Mr. Solzhenitsyn's position on the purge of Communist leaders by Stalin, Mr. Medvedev says, "It is a profound moral error to think that Stalin's reprisal against basic cadres of the Communist party and the Soviet state was . . a triumph of some historic justice. No, the death of these people became a prologue to even more terrible injustices not only concerning the party but the whole people

Local fishermen have grumbled that the security measures cut them off from some of the best sea trout fishing flats in Biscayne Bay.

A Remarkable 'Figaro' on TV

By Henry Pleasants

ONDON, Sept. 23 (IHT).—The accomplishments T ONDON, Sept 23 (122).—120 of BEC-TV in the production of opera since John Culshaw took over as head of music programs four years ago are beginning to assume historic significance significance.

Saturday night's broadcast of "The Marriage of Figaro," latest in a series that has already given us "Peter Grimes," "Owen Wingrave," "Falstaff" and "La Traviata," again demonstrated how far Culshaw and his production staff have gone in solving problems that bave stumped just about everyone who has undertaken to transfer opera from the theater to the screen.

Spatial Perspective

Most productions come a cropper by moving the cameras in too close to the singer-actors, resulting in a loss of spatial perspective and a feeling on the viewer's part that the singers are yelling at him. Even more disastrously, the miscoscopic exploration of facial anatomy in close-ups is at once distasteful and tedious.

Another vexing problem has been synchroniza-tion. Most filmed operas have first been recorded and then mimed for the cameras. There seems always to be a discrepancy in what the singers do with their mouths when they are really single and when they are merely going through the r tions. What one sees is unconvincing, and w one hears does not jibe with what is seen.

BBC-TV productions, and especially this n
"Marriage of Figaro," have found a nice balastor the camera distance, so that while one is clo to the action than in the theater, the singer-act are always seen within an appropriate setting. cameras are also used admitty to point up trey tant details of business and locale.

Strongly Cast

Even more importantly, BBC-TV has worked a system, involving the use of mirrors and sistant conductors, whereby recording and film are done simultaneously in adjoining studies. W one sees and hears is, in effect a live performs The new production is strongly cast, with Tho Allen as Figaro, John Shirley-Quirk as Almar Elizabeth Harwood as the countess Norma rowes as Susanna, and a personable newcor. Rosanne Creffield, as Cherubino .

MUSIC IN EAST GERMANY

Some Swashbuckling Meyerbeen

By Paul Moor

EIPZIG, East Germany, Sept. L 23 (IET).—At stage left, in big capital letters: Down With the Catholics! Long Live the True Faith! Stage right: Down with the Huguenots! Long Live the Holy Roman Church! Belfast, 1974? No, France, 1572.

Giacomo Meyerbeer's grand operas "The Huguenots" and "Robert the Devil" stood high on the list of the 19th century's most popular operas, captivating Europe from east to west and north to south against no less a competitor than Gioacchino Rossini. Had Cecil B. De Mille lived then, he and Meyerbeer would have made a great and inevitable team.

In an age when other media have long since taken over the pomp and panoply formerly associated with truly grand opera, Meyerbeer has universally fallen pretty much into oblivion, If Joachim Herz's new production of "The Huguenots" at the Leipzig Opera can hardly compare with Mendelssohn's revival of Bach's forgotten "St. Matthew's Passion" and the worldwide Bach revival which followed, it does provide one hell of an evening of swashbuckling, blood - and - thunder realistisches Musiktheuter.

Forget about details of the text, a sort of cartoon whipped togeth-

One half - witted misunderstanding leads to another, both camps take homicidal umbrage, and act five ends with the bloody massacre of St. Bartholomew's night, in which the Catholics mowed down the Huguenots-ostensibly for loving, as in Northern Ireland today, the same God of merey in a slightly different fashion.

The Leipzig Opera's stage aperture equals that of the Bolshoi in Moscow, with an even greater stage depth, and Joachim Herz makes imaginative use of almost every cubic foot of it by deploying as many as 250 performers at a time. Bernhard Schröter has provided sumptuous sets and costumes for the first two acts, but the other three play amid scaffoldings and platforms reminis-cent of workshop productions, leaving one to wonder whether maybe his budget gave out aboot halfway through.

Herz and the three collaborators who worked with him in trying to make the libretto a little less silly and more credible have managed to get from French archives about 30 minutes' worth of original Meyerbeer material never before performed. U.K. Car Firm Gets Workers' Aid

Aston Martin's workers have agreed to invest in the troubled luxury auto maker, forgo a 5 per cent pay rise due next month and freeze all wage increases for a year in return for representation on the board. The plan, devised by the local branch of the Engine Workers Union in collaboration with manage ment and a local political candidate, gives the workers two representatives among the Aston Martin directors. The local candidate involved is Laborite and millionaire publisher Robert Maxwell, who has said he will invest some of his own money in the company. An Aston Martin statement said the firm is operating normally and receiving new orders. company had asked the government for financial help to enable it to meet anti-pollution re-quirements in the United States, its major overseas market. It is now delaying the request.

Hoechst Group Sales Seen Rising 30%

World sales of Hoechst, the West German chemical and pharmaceuticals firm, are expected to rise about 30 per cent to 20.5 billion deutsche marks in the current year, says chairman Rolf Sammet. About 60 per cent of the sales will be abroad with turnover of goods actually produced abroad totaling around 4.5 billion DM. Results of the Roussel-Uclaf group in France, in which Hoechst took a majority holding in February, is not included in the figures but will be consolidated in the final 1974 result. Roussel-Uclaf sales are put at the equivalent of 1.5 billion DM for the year. About a third of the overall sales rise will be due to higher sales volume with two-thirds coming from higher prices, Mr. Sammet says. Hoechst would like to reduce the level of export salescurrently at 52 per cent— by expanding produc-tion abroad. World group fixed assests invest-ment in 1974 will total 1.5 billion DM; domestic group investment will be around 750 million DM Investment abroad will concentrate on the United States, where projects worth 800 million DM will start next year. Holland with between 300 and 320 million DM and Brazil with between 200 and 230 million DM.

Boom Expected for U.S. Shipping

Legislation, on its way to approval in Congress, is expected to provide a boom for the U.S. shipping industry. The bill, which is due soon from a House-Senate conference committee after having passed both houses, requires mitially that 20 per cent of all imported oil be carried in U.S.-flag ships, with that level increasing to 30 per cent by mid-1977. At present, about 5 per cent of all incoming oil arrives under the U.S. flag. The legislation has stirred more than the usual waves, with labor unions, led by the seamen, practically united in its favor and major oil companies opposed. Proponents cite a need for more dependence on U.S. ships for national security reasons and to help the balance of payments. Opponents criticize the inflation inherent in paying higher costs for U.S. ships and have raised the cry of renewed protectionism. However, President Ford is expected to sign the bill when it comes out of committee, the Wall Spect Journal reports. U.S. tanker production is about one million deadweight tons a year, with some eight million tons already afloat. In the late 1970s, one analyst estimates, the demand will be for some 25 million to 30 million tons, if the 30 per cent

Oil Pipeline

Alaska Project to Get Procurement Priority

WASHINGTON, Sept. 23 (NYT) The government has decided to invoke the Defense Production Act to make sure that construction of the oil pir line across Alaska does not fall behind schedule this winter, informed sources reported today.

An order signed Friday and to be published this week will give the pipeline consortium, Aleyska Pipeline Service Co., priority in obtaining from steel mills certain critical items, such as control valves, temporary bousing for work crews, siles for cement and electrical equipment. The order was signed by John Sawhill, the federal energy administrator, and Leslie Bray, director of the office of preparedness of the General Services Administration. They found that any delay in completion of the pipeline, scheduled for 1977, might jeopardize national defense.

The Office of Management and Budget was reported to have expressed concern that assignment of a national defense priority to the pipeline might cause disruptions elsewhere.

The view of energy officials is that some delays in other projects could result but that they would be relatively minor. The officials contend that the major oil companies already have large stocks of oilfield equipment, and that steel mills would be asked to supply smaller companies first. "The quantities involved are not great from the perspective of the whole industry," a government source said, "but for Aleyska it is crucial that they get these items this winter,"

If Aleyska is unable to get delivery this winter, it was said, the 900-mile, 48-inch oil line could fall a full year behind schedule. The reason given was that the fragile condition of the Arctic timera and other environmental considerations preclude delivery and movement of beavy equipment except when the ground is deeply frozen.

U.S. Invoking Inaction on Bank Rate Law to Insure Causes N.Y. Price Slide

NEW YORK, Sept. 23 (IHT).-Stocks drifted to a mixed closing on the New York Stock Exchange today with brokers reporting dis appointment that no major bank had cut its prime rate despite falling short-term rates.

The Dow Jones industrial average fell 7.04 points to 663.72, although advancing issues narrowly led declines about 740 to 665 at the close.

Volume totaled 12.13 million shares compared with 16.25 million shares Friday. Farly in today's session First National Bank of Chicago an-nounced that it lecided in its weekly prime rate review not to reduce the rate. On Friday, First National City Bank of New York also stayed at the prevailing 12 per cent prime rate.

Brokers said hope for a cut was raised by continuing signs of easier Federal Reserve credit policy and resulting sharply lower short-term rates.

Heavily traded Coca-Cola Co. fell 6 to 63. The company said it knew of no reason for the stock's decline, bot industry analysts speculated that profits of scft-drink manufecturers were being squeezed by the sharp increase in the price of sugar

Less active Pepsico fell 1 3/4 38 1/2, while Royal Crown Cola lost a fraction. The American Stock Exchange index closed up 0.32 to 67. The NASDA , industrial average on the over-the-counter market fell 0.21 to 58.96. Bonds extended Friday's uptrend in fairly active trading, although prices finished off their highest levels of the session while

Treasury bills continued to move

Prices moved ahead in early trading, with some issues gaining as much as 3/4 point following some fairly aggressive buying from both professionals and institutions.

The rise was blunted somewhat in later activity, however, as the rice in price brought out some liquidation, and the gains were reduced to 1/8 to 5/8 point with buyers and sellers about evenly matched at the close.

Government coupons also extended their recent advance, adding between 1/8 and 1/4 at the short end of the market and 1/2 to 3/4 point in the longer maturities.

Treasury hills moved ahead, with most of the advance con-centrated in the three-month bill. In the absence of almost any supply, the issue closed at 8.33 per cent bid, 6.78 per cent offered on some dealers' quotation sheets, against last Monday's auction average of 8.185 per cent and Friday's close of around 7 per cent

Dealers said the extremely wide ouotation on the bill pointed to the artificiality of the market, adding that the performance of the six and 12-month bills was far more representative, with both issues dipping about eight points in yield.

Elsewhere in the money markets federal funds traded in a narrow range despite three open market operations by the Fed.

The Fed negotiated one round of three-day and one round of one-day repurchase agreements. and then bought $150 million of bills for regular delivery on customer account, but there was little movement in funds, which beld between 11.125 and 11.25 per cent through the day.

In Chicago all months of soy-beans futures shot up to their daily limits of 20 cen's a bushel on a Midwest frost that may have severely damaged the crop. The · 1975 contract advanced to $8.07 a bushel. No estimates of the frost damage are available.

The frost also affected corn, with some months up to the daily limit of 10 cents a bushel and December at $3.51 a bushel. Wheat finished 6 to 2 cents higher after ing up '" 1/2 cents earlier on corn and soybeans gains.

In New York gains in gold and silver bullion markets abroad and strength in some grains pushed the metals market up. Silver finished up 15 cents to 16 cents an ounce, while copper futures climbed 2 cents.

Canada. Home ice of the helpful bank. For a good look at the action, get your copy of 'Businessman's Canada'

It takes talent, teamwork, and a knowledge of fundamentals to excel at Canada's most popular sport. And you'll need those same skills working for you to win in the Canadian business arena. Like hockey, the Royal Bank was born in Canada. And because we're Canada's leading bank, we have all the resources you'll need to help you make a successful start in Canada's fast-growing industrial environment.

Our book, 'Businessman's Canada' gives you a good look at the fundamentals of taxes, labour, tariffs, government policies, economic conditions and regional differences.

A request on your corporate letterhead will speed your copy to you. And you'll begin to see how helpful it can be to team up with the Royal Bank.

Here is a handy little aid containing many useful facts about Sweden.

It has, for example, facts about the labor market, national accounts, industrial output, prices and wages, and indicators of the economic standard. Plus many other details that come in very useful when dealing with the Swedish market.

You can receive the folder without cost. Just fill in the coupon, send it to us, and soon you can have Sweden in your pocket.

LOVE FEAST

TRAGEDY, some literary scholars claim, is declarative. Comedy is interrogative. In an age of strong faith religious writers could drape their characters in a tragic mantle and soar from man's depths to the heights of heaven without suffering the bends. Nowadays, religious writers seem more cautious. They move obliquely and by indirection because the gate is strait indeed if not shut altogether—and they are never certain how many peo-ple share their preoccupations. Frequently, a nervous comedy has become their mode and the answers they offer can be divined only from the quality and pattern of their questions.

For nearly 25 years, in eight novels and four volumes of theological meditation, Frederick Buechner has been pondering abswers in the form of wry, amusing and wise questions. But not until 1971 did he discover a completely effective voice for his theme. Actually, it was two voices -that of the parrator, Antonio Parr, an urbane, intelligent New Yorker who views the world and himself with a mixture of irony and awe, and that of Leo Bebb, Evangelist, Founder of the Church of Holy Love, Inc., and of the Open Heart Church, International President of Gospel Paith College, which offered ordination through the mail ('Put yourself on God's payroll—start working for Jesus NOW.'), ex-Bible salesman, ex-con."

First in "Lion Country" then in "Open Heart" (1972), and now in "Love Feast," these two improbable pilgrims have wandered from the wastes of Florida to suburban Connecticut to Europe and finally to Princeton, N.J., with Bebb saving an occasional soul, bathing some people in the Blood of the Lamb and others in the excre-ment of the horse, and attempting with very little success to separate the sacred from the pro-fane. Parr's characteristic pose has been that of detached observer, but he hasn't remained untouched by the evangelist's energy and spirit. Repeatedly, what his reason rejects his heart embraces.

Along the way, Antonio has married Bebb's stepdaughter, Sharon, a girl with a dime-store name and a million-dollar body, whom he has never understood and sadly leaves. He has had puzzling encounters with Clarence Golden, Bebb's former cellmate, who may be an angel and certainly is a convicted arsonist. He has tried to fathors the zealotry of

Bronco Fails On Final Kick

Denver placekicker Jim Turner, who saw his teammates block a 25-yard field-goal attempt by Pittsburgh's Roy Gerela as time ended in regulation play, missed a 41-yard attempt with three-minutes left yesterday in the first sudden-death game in National Football League regular season history as the Broncos and Steelers played to a 36-35

Pittsburgh, which has never beaten Denver in regular-season play, losing three and tying once, appeared to have the game won in regulation play as it started to move downfield with 52 seconds left in the game and the score tied.

Joe Gilliam hit Franco Harris with a 22-yard pass, then came back with a 15-yard pass to John Stallworth after the Steelers were called for illegal motion.

Into Each Fight Some Rain, And a Few Injuries, May Fall

NEW YORK, Sept. 23 (NYT). George Foreman's frank and open countenance is more this week than last. Muhammad Ali says he is responsible; he says he had a vision of George with a wounded eyebrow, and his power worked too early. Both men are billeted in President Mobutu Sese Seko's palace at N'Sele, Zaire's equivalent of Camp David, and evidently they will remain there beside the old Congo until they have fought for the heavyweight championship of the world.

The fight, originally scheduled for 3 s.m. Wednesday, Kinshasa time, is off for a mouth and possibly a century. Anthorities in Zaire are wondering what to do with 280,000 eggs, 75,000 pats of butter and 115,000 lumps of sugar laid in for the occasion. Video Techniques, Inc., the closed-cir-cuit promoter bankrolled for $10,550,000 by the Swiss investment house Risnalia, and for $1,450,000 by Hemdale Leisure Corp. of Britain is wondering 22-yard scoring pass from in theaters, suditoriums and race tracks around the United States.

The fact that the best-laid schemes o' mice and men often go astray is not exactly stop-press news, but it always shocks rookie promoters like Video Techniques. Experience keeps a dear school. Poor Richard tells us, but fools will learn in no other. Promoters who stay in school long enough learn that fights are put off because of weather, injury, some-body's change of heart, buyer resistance and more arcane

The Delays Came

After Barney Ross took the welterweight championship from Jimmy McLaruin, their return bout in the old Long Island Bowl in New York was put off three times. First weather got in the way, then the Jewish holidays arrived and Barney refused to profane them, then it rained again. When at last they met. Ross lost his title as every cham-plon did who ever attempted a defense in Long Island City.

In the first match ever made by Jim Norris's International Boxing Club, Jake Lamotta challenged Marcel Cerdan for the middleweight champlemakip in the Detroit ball park. When rain forced a 24-hour postponement, journalists Bill Heinz of the New York Sun and Lester Bromberg of the New York World-Telegram paid a call on Lamotta in the hotel room he shared with his blonda wife, Vicki.

They chatted a while, then Lamotta asked for their predictions on the fight. Both were picking Cerdan, Jake shook his

An Economy of Words

Greenspan, chief presiden as I said it. economic adviser, endeared himtelf last week to the country with a remark he made to a group of leaders representing the old, suck and handicapped. Greenspan said Wall Street stock brokers have suffered the most from the nation's economic decline, When I saw Prof. Greenspan say this deadpan broke into laughter and thought

Buchwald to myself, "The Ford administration does have humor after all." A few minutes later I received a call from a congressman friend asking me if I had written the line for Greenspan. "I wish I had." I said. "It has to be one of the funniest things I've ever seen on television." "Well, could you find out who his writer is? I need some jokes for my campaign this fall and, if Greenspan's man can come up with any other one-liners as good as this one, I'll be in clover." I called the Council of Economic Advisers and spoke to a man on the phone.

"I'm trying to find out who Prof. Greenspan's gag writer is." "What are you talking about?" the man asked.

"You know, the guy who wrote that line about Wall Street brokers hurting the most from in-

First prize for the harp went to Moscow's Olga Ortenberg, while Gary Kendali of Philadelphia took first place in the male vocal section. Kreutzenbarg, a group from West Berlin, won first prize in the vocal quartet section. A total of 259 candidates from 37 countries competed in the lesti-

ASHINGTON - Prof. Alan flation," I started laughing again

The man on the other end of the line said frostily, "Prof. Greenspan meant every word he said. Brokers have suffered the most,"

I was laughing so hard I couldn't stop, "I didn't think you economists went in for that kind of humor," I said, "Gosh that's funny. Do you have any other

"You apparently believe that Prof. Greenspan was joshing at his meeting with the representatives of the old, sick and handicapped. But inflation is no joking matter. The professor was talking in terms of percentages, Whether the old, the sick and the handicapped want to believe it or not, we have statistics to prove that brokers have been hit the

"Don't go too fast," I said, try-ing to contain myself. "I want to write this all down."

"You must remember that. when inflation strikes, brokers commissions, which are fixed by law, are immediately affected When you have low turnover in Wall Street stocks, the broker is the first to feel it. Who's hurt by high interest rates more than anybody else?"

"Don't tell me," I said chuckling "Let me guess." "I'm not sure you're taking me seriously," the man said. "Of course I am, I think the most important thing during a crisis is for people to laugh at themselves, If Prof. Greenspan can provide us with a line like he did about the brokers every week we can win the war against inflation. Let me ask you something. Does Greenspan have any good ones about people suffering in the

"You mean the line about the okers was his?"

"Yup. Greenspan's a fountain of mirth and he comes up with things like that all the time It must be great for the President to have somebody like that around to take his mind off the econo-

By Jan Sjöby

DORL, Belgium (IET),—There has always been a left bank to the river Scheldt but for more than a thousand years the burghers of prosperous rightbank Antwerp tried to ignore that fact. The polder farmers on the other side were more or less foreigners, sometimes hostile The Aniwerpendurs went about their business and die van over 't water (those from across the river) minded theirs.

That situation, originating with the partition of Charlemagne's empire in 343, is rapidly becoming purely historical. These days the left-bankers are getting more attention from Antwerp than they ever dreamed of or bargained for. On right-hank drawing boards are ambitious plans for turning much or most of the left-bank farm country into vast industrial zones, crisscrossed by an extensive network of locked-in harbor channels and basins. Construction work is already under way and the left-bank project will be completed in the 1980s if no bedrock esistance is encountered.

The left-bankers are not actually up in arms but they are grumbling, increasingly

"We realize that a handful of villagers can't fight a pitched battle against mighty Antwerp," said Marc Debaive of 500-yearold Doel, some 10 miles and four bends down the river from the Antwerp pilot house and a couple of miles from the Dutch border. "But we want to influence their decisions, make them tread comewhat more warily across our fields and meadows. We feel that we have a heritage to guard on our side of the Scheldt, same as they have on theirs." There are definite cultural and historical differences between the two river banks: The Antwerpeners consider their city a fairly sophisticated metropolis, having housed men named Rubens and Jordaens, Plantin Mercator and Ortelius. The leftbankers are, or at least were, more or less anonymous rustics.

Accents and Rings

"They speak with a different accent," said Antwerp municipal spokesman Jacques Verdonck, "and they wear their wedding rings on the left hand. We have ours on the right. Through much of recorded history they were, from time to time, more or less loyal to the kings of France. were, from time to time, more or less allied with the German emperors. When our ancestors didn't ignore them, they fought them."

There is a saying up the river that the Antwerpenaars thank the Lord for the River Scheldt. They thank the River

"One from across the river" encounte red by photographer René De Voeght.

Scheldt for whatever else they may "That's truth with modifications," said Mr. Debaive. "They don't like to admit it on the other side but they have problems up in Antwerp and one of them is the

The Scheldt is a tidal river and the differences between high and low tide may be 16 feet or more. The incoming tide brings hage amounts of sand. There are dredgers out in the channel practically every day.

Antwerp, bursting at the seams after World War I, established a bridgehead on the left bank in 1923 by purchasing some 3,000 acres of East Flanders land. Two unnels were dug under the river 10 years later and a third (named J.F. Kennedy) in 1969. A fourth is planned. A residential area and industrial zones went up. separated by the St. Anne Woods, non-existant before the early 30s. Somewhat later a new industrial area was established downriver across from the Baudouin locks. Present plans call for total annexation of the left bank, as far as the Dutch border. A canal is planned, across East Flanders and Dutch territory, to Dutch Baalhoek. An alternative is an all-Belgian canal from Zeebrugge to the Scheldt, a project that may bring 200,000-tonners into the projected left-bank basins of the inland port.

Vanishing Towns

"We have at present some 2,600 municipalities in Belgium," said Mr. Debaive. The national government has decided to reduce that number to around 500 by 1976, for practical, rational and economic reasons. Most of the left bank across from Antwerp will very likely become Antwer-

There are roughly 1,200 residents in Doel. about 3,500 in nearby, upriver Kallo. Some 3,000 of the total make their living from agriculture, or agricultural service trades. "Most of them will be turned into stevedores or industrial laborers," said Mr. Debaive, "and I suppose that there isn't much we can do about that.

"What we can do though, is to claim our right to cultural identity. We ran over 't water want Doel and Kallo set aside as East Flanders enclaves, administratively under Beveren town in East Flanders, south of here, west of Antwerp. We realize that our polder way of life is going, if not already gone, but we want to salvage whatever we can of whatever remains."

In the center of Doel is the Hooghuis (high house), next to the church, rising all of two stories above ground level. It was built for Rubens and finished in 1643, three years after the artist's death. It passed on to his second wife, Hélène Fourment. A few years ago it was scheduled for demolition, being an old pile of bricks of no commercial use.

"Then we discovered the historical significance of the house," said jeweler Jan Heylen, sole resident of the quaint edifice. "We decided to turn it into a cultural center for us remaining left-bankers. We started out softly, last spring, with a photo exhibition of works by students from the Fine Arts Academy in Sint-Niklass, commenting on things past and times to come. We are planning a show of left-bank art, sometime in December.

"With all due respect to the Antwerpenaars," said Mr. Heylen, "we rustics van over 't water believe that we have a touch of culture too."

Oldest U.S. Convict Is Turning 99

The oldest convict in the United States will celebrate his 99th birthday Tuesday in a hospital bed in a Columbia, Ohio, jail John Weber, who has been in jail for 48 years, is still chipper, say nurses, who call him the cars go by," he say:

"The years haven't been all that bad," Weber says. There was a time when I wanted to be free again, but no more. I'm too old and too tired. And there's no place to go."

Weber was sentenced to prison for life for the death of his 18-month-old daughter, Testimony showed that Weber apparently socidentally shot the Weber's regular bids for commutation and parole were burned down until 1972 when his conviction was commuted to seconddegree murder, making him eligible for release. But by then it was too late. Weber was 97 and in failing health. The perole board decided that the best thing to do was to keep him in prison. Weber says he doesn't mind. They're good to me here."

U.S. Supreme Court Chief Justice Warren Burger, who got a bicycle for his birthday last week, re-entered a hospital Tuesday to recover from a spill he took Friday night while cycling near his home in Arlington, Va. Burger, 67, suffered a broken right finger, a chipped left shoulder bone, facial cuts and bruised ribs trying to avoid a speeding car. He was treated and released from an Arlington hospital but was advised by his doctor to enter Bethesda in Maryland.

A Supreme Court spokesman said that police believe Burger may have been struck a giancing blow by the car, which did not stop. Burger is expected to remain in the hospital for a few days.
